Tanglewood and the rolling hills of the Berkshires in Western Massachusetts offer a plethora of superlative performing arts during the compact summer season. During the busy weekends of July and August, cultural aficionados are hard-pressed to choose between the glorious concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) in Tanglewood's open air Shed and the more intimate Seiji Ozawa Hall and several fine theatre festivals. Daytime excursions include: to the picturesque college town of Williamstown for a visit to the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute, where we will view the priceless permanent collection; 'The Mount', Edith Wharton's gracious 1902 mansion outside Lenox; and the Norman Rockwell Museum in nearby Stockbridge. Time will be available daily for you to explore other venues and highlights of Lenox. For more travel information about the region, visit <http://berkshires.org/>.
